BY PACIFIC TELEGRAPH.

SPECIAL TO THE DAILY VEDETTE.

New York, 23d. Circumstances which have come to the knowledge of the government render it nearly certain that Booth's berse fell with him on Friday night, the 14th, and it is believed, caused a fracture of one of his legs. It is also reported that he has divested himself of his moustache.

The Suffolk, Va, correspondent of the Herald, states that rebel officers who have agained these, report that the news of Lee's surrender reached Jeff Davis at Danville, and Jeff left the next morning at daylight for Greensboro. Jeff states. that if hard pushed, he was sure he could rally an army around him and make another stand, and that he should never leave the limits of the Confederacy. He issued orders to burn the bridges over the Webren and Roanoke rivers, which was reported to be done; also for the evacuation of Weldon.

New York, 23d.

Toronto papers contain affidavits stating, that the notorious McDonald of that city, together with another, named Dennison, preparing a pirate at Collingswood for the purpose of plundering on the Lakes by the seizure of the vessels.

Washington, April 23d. President Johnson's speech to the Indiana delegation yesterday, was more important than any yet delivered.

The President said, we are living at a time when the public mind had almost become oblivious to what treason is The time bad arrived, when American people should be educated and taught that treason against the U. S. Government is the highest coime that can be committed, and those engaged in it should suffer all the penalties. It is for the promulgation of anything that I have not heretofore said to say that traiters must be made edious; that traitors must be punished and imprisoned The social power must be destroyed, if not, they will still maintain the ascendency, and may again become numerous and powerful; for in the words of a former Senator of the United States when traitors become numerous enough treason becomes respectable and I say at ter making treason odious; every Union man should be remunerated out of the pockets of those who have inflicted great suffering upon the country. While I say, as to the leaders of treason, punishment I also say, leniency and conciliation to the thousands whom they have misled and deceived.

In speaking of reconstruction, he made the following remarks: Upon this idea of destroying states, my position has heretofore been well known, and there is no cause to change it now. Some are satisfied with the idea that states are to be lost in territorial and other divisions, and are to lose their character as states but their life breath has only been sus pended, and it is the high constitutional obligation that we have to secure each ese states in the possession and enjoyment of a Republican form of Gov enment. A state may be in the Government with peculiar institutions, and by operations of rebellion, love that feature, but it was a State when it went into the rebellion, and when it comes out without that institution, it is still a state I hold it as a solemn obligation on any one of these states, where the rebel army has been beaten back or expelled, I care not how small the number of Union men, if enough to man the ship of state, I hold it, I say, the high duty to protect and secure to them a Republican form of Government.

This is no mere opinion, it is expressed in conformity with my understanding of the genius and theory of our Government. Adjusting and putting the Government upon its lega again. I think the progress and work must fall into the hands of its friends. If a State is to be mursed until it gains strength, it must be nursed by its friends, not smothered by its enemies. Now, permit me to remark. that while I have opposed dissolution and disintegration on the other I are equally opposed to centralization of power in the hands of a to proportions of grandeur? Is not our few.

Our noble President has fallen; but in falling he has conquered what armies could not conquer. His death is the death of many enmi-

The life, character and illustrious errices of the late President, Abraham Incoln, delivered at the obsquies in the Tabernacle, Salt Lake City, on the 19th inst., by Rev. Norman Metals in the Color of the late President, Abraham but the bereaved nation is still rich in great and illustrious sons. The occasion will give birth to the destined man and in the Color of th Leod, Pastor of the Congregational

Mr. Mayor and fellow-citizens: great man has fallen on the heights of his country's glory. The people's chosen President, the poor man's friend, the large-heated, noble-minded Christian patriot, Abraham Lincoln, is no more.

The thrice-cursed hand of the assassing crushed out the brave life that for years agonized in a Gethsemane of sorrow for the nation's life; and to day a mighty na tion is draped in mourning and bedewed with tears for the death of her illustrious son. But blessed be God, the principles of right and of liberty, for which he wielded up his precious life, are immortal and cannot die. Neither bullet, nor steel, nor the poison cup can arrest them in their mission of elevation and of freedom, or stave off the grand consummation of

Even now, amid the direful calamitie of the present, those principles rise calm and defiant, speaking words of lofty hope and cheer to a sorrowing people, unfurl-ing the banner of expectancy and of coning the banner of expectancy and of confidence to the oppressed of every land and leading on the struggling bands in the great battle to victory.

No, no; not alone in the brave heart that burst when our good and true President died, are the principles enthroned on which are pillared the hopes of our afflicted country; but in the hearts of the millions of his sorrowing fellow-countrymen, who will now, by the ennobling might of sorrow, be uplifted in purpose and in daring to the grand necessities of the occasion, nerved to new heroic deeds and to all the sacrifices by deathless principles demanded.

The heavens suddenly gathered darkness; the storm of passion swept the besom of the peaceful waters; the wild waves rose and dashed round the glorious bark freighted with the hopes of a world. The brave pilot, calm and fearless, was at his post; the strong hand was on the wheel; his great heart was nerved with holy purposes; his countenance lit up with grand inspirations. The light-nings of human wrath gleamed around him, but for long months of peril he remained scathless, even as the Hebrew martyrs in their flery sepulchre, because he had with him the same Divine presence and was shielded by the same nipotence. The great heart of the nation was fixed upon him; the prayers of millions ascended in his behalf, that vengeance might be stayed until his great mission was accomplished.

Ever and again, as the dark cloud was uplifted or rent, the nero was seen, still at his post of duty? Some there were who comprehended great souls and they saw sadness gathering on the countenance of the elected leader of the people; but that sadness was mellowed and softened down by the tender sympathies of his noble heart. At last, however, when there seemed to be a lull in the storm, and when the bow of hope was seen in the horizon of liberty, a malignant flash struck down the patriot.

Oh, how has the mighty fallen and the strong arm relaxed!—the life so precious quenched, and the cup of agony pressed to the trembling lips of the nation; but the proud, heaven-guided bark still floats in triumph on the wave.

el death of her great leader is in no sense arrested in her mission of progress and of liberty. Principles, ideas-not mengovern America; and these are, as the nature of

Though we mourn their seemingly untimely end, yet men never die until their work is accomplished. Civilization is unchesked in its sublime advance : the forces of eternal truth, the agencies of Almighty God, these, these are powers on the side of great principles, shielding and guarding the interests of the ages yet to guarding the interests of the ages yet to come and securing their ultimate triumph. What to the unthinking may seem to be our great and irreparable loss, will yet be found our exceeding great and glorious gain. As a people, the tender sorrow for the death of the departed will remain, but the bitterness will be extracted.

As patriots we mourn, we serrow, weep our fallen leader; a sense af be-reavement, a feeling of loneliness comes home to every patriot heart. It is well, it is fitting that we should bear our tribute of sorrow, and lay it on the shrine of the great bereavement But are we crush-ed, self-abandoned? In the night of dis-furnish the energies, the resources and the grand inspirations to guard the na-tion's priceless interests and to guide her through all the stormy way of her destiny.

If the Moses of liberty has died on the summit of the mount of vision, after hav-ing drunk the raptures of the future, the stern Joshua still survives to head the outward march and to consummate the great victory.

I tremble, yet I exult. My soul bows in reverence before a present God; yet my confidence for the nation deepens even now, when I gaze through the gloom of the present, to the grand. coming destiny of America.

To-day I mingle my tears with the tears of millions. I sorrow, but I hope, because the Lord God Omnipotent reign Heroic purposes are to-day deepening in bereaved and saddened hearts that will bear our nation safely through all her great perils, despite all the efforts of her enomies and her opposers and up-lift her to light and liberty. Her des-tiny is upward and onward. Her mis-sion is the mission of liberty and of empire; and the sacrifice of no life, how-ever precious, can impede her progress or clog the fiery wheels of her advancing

A million lives as precious as the dear, precious life we mourn to-day might be sacrificed, but would the nation be selfabandendoned, or abandoned of her God? Would her deathless purpose of freedom everywhere through the broad land we call our country be damped, or her ter-rible cadeavors in the stern mission of accomplishment in the least abated? No. To-day, in her mourning, bedewed with tears for her great fallen patriot, the leader of her choice, the son of her affections, bowed to the dust with the anguish of her mighty grief, she is stronger and nobler than ever before; and now, as never before, she is consecrated to progress and to liberty, to the sublime mission of abasing oppressors and blessing the people. The moral forces of the ages seem to be culminating, gathering, concentrating on American soil, for the last battle for freedom.

There was a necessity for the great sacrifice, or the bullet had been turned aside by the hand of God and the hero had survived to accomplish his work.

By the blood of our illustrious marty new national redemption is to be effected in America. If Washington was the "father of his country," Abraham Lincoln was her redeemer. In death he has conquered many enmities and many hatreds. The time of his death, the manner of his death, and the causes of his death, all—all were necessary to the grand results that are to follow.

Is that Almighly being who notices the fall of a sparrow, regardless of the death of lovers of their country and humanity—the glorious martyrs of liberty? Is there not an influence springing from their death—a sort of divine life leaping from their gory graves—ranging itself among the mighty forces of the eternal that are overturning, everywhere overturning and hastening the grand day of jubilee, when the oppressed millions of mankind will receive their birthright their God-given inheritance-liberty?

Thus, then, in our sorrows we fall back upon what? Upon the sustaining philosophy of the Christian—that God governs the world.

The death of our beloved President is not an evidence that God has abandened us as a people; but rather an evidence of the exceeding glory he has in reserve for us as a nation. The enemies whose unreasonable hatred the pure life of Mr. Lincoln and his stern adherance to principle only exasperated, will new be con-quered by his death.

We mourn a great fallen patriot, but though our eyes are dimmed with the tears of a manly sorrow, we can see glimpses of the lofty uses of the great bereavement, and of the grand design to be accomplished by the great death. In the hour of bereavement of familieswhen the father, the head of that liftle home, that republic of affection, is cold and silent in death, the divisions, the and silent in death, the divisions, the strifes, and the differences of prosperous days are all forgotten. Hallowing influences now flood the heart; ennobling processes are there evolving. There is a calming down of the stormy passions. In the solemn presence and beneath the dark shadow of the wing of death, asperities and hatreds die. So will it be with my afflicted country.

Our noble President has fallen; but in falling he has conquered what armice.

love; and love hinds even enemies to the him and say, "escause of freedom. Therefore I sorrow, seemeti good in but I hope.

As a patriot, I loved the illustrious dead, because he loved his countries. dead, because he loved his country better than his fame; because he was ever faithful to her purposes, true to her genius and at last a martyr to her great principles. I loved him because I discovered in him the elements of sturdy mashood conserved to his country's glory—conserved to the cause of liberty. He was the people's friend. He had no interest inseperable from theirs. had no interest inseperable from theirs. He had the heart of a noble father, full of kindly sympathies and generous im-

In the high position in which his country placed him, though weighed down with the vast responsibilities of the great trust committed to his keeping, he cher-ished the same feelings of kindly regard and of neighborly sympathy as in his private station; so that the humblest citizen in the land could approach the plain, honest, unpretending President of a mighty people, confident of a cerdial a warm pressure of the hand, welcome—a warm pressure of the hand, indicating the possession of a noble heart, and words of cheer, words of sympathy, whatever his sorrows or his Sprung from the toiling, struggling masses of the great nation, he had a heart to feel for them and words of sympathy to cheer and comfort them.

I loved him because of his many es timable qualities of head and of heart. I loved him because he was devoid of every sentiment of malignity and haeven towards his enemies. Review his life. In no act of his administration during the trying ordeal of four peril-cus years do we discover anything like vengeance. It was an ineffaceable sense of duty to himself and to God; it was an undying fidelity to the principles that are the basis of free, democratic, republican institutions, that bore him up and urged him on in the high, stern mission

For its tenderness, his heart was like the heart of a little child. It was not in his nature to exult over the fallen, or to crush even the enemies of liberty. was a great and magnanimous heart, that wept over the crimes of those, who were hawking at the generous heart of their country and seeking to destroy the most glorious government ever sanctioned and smiled upon by Almighty God

Mr. Lincoln regarded even the traitors as the children of our America. In the Cabinet, he was their great advocate, pleading their cause and asking for mery, not vengeance: and vet. O, my God! e was assassinated!—as if he had been

The blow that crsuiled his noble hear vas the most terrific blow that ever fell upon the South. It was aimed at the nation's life. Perhaps its results will be fearful on the nation's enemies. The great mediator, the good father of his people, who would have exhausted the resources of his generous nature in pleading the cause of his very enemies—standing between them and the aroused wrath of an injured people; that great man, whose sympathies would have heal-ed their ghastly wounds and saved them from a crushing humiliation; whose merage af amnesty would have awakened a glad jubilee even in the regions of desolation—was assassinated by a pretended lover of his country and of liberty.

The great success of the nation over armed rebellion, the near prospect of termination to the dreadful struggle and the re-establishment of peace, union and liberty, had opened the great heart of our President; and, had he been allowed to live, he would have made generous conwho will now plead their cause? Whose oath. He who was inca

It may be that, in his excess of pity. in the overflowing tenderness of his generous heart, Mr. Lincoln, had he lived, would have made concessions inconsistent with God's grand and stupendous purposes respecting America. It may be that the full consummation for which we have been agonizing and struggling for years as a people would have failed of its accomplishment. Now this our God, the guardian and defender of liberty, would not permit.

The blood of every slain hero in our holy war must and will have its grand results. The germinating scale of great results.

results. The germinating seeds of great principles will not and cannot be eradicated or destroyed. As God is true, the harvest conacth—the holy purposes of freedom must and will be realized.

It may be that a stronger arm, a stouter heart. a more fearless will; it may be that mental and physical energies of more terrific volcanic force and power were nesessary to bring about the grand consummation. I do not know, but God knoweth; and to-day I bow before him and say, "even so, Father, for so it seemeth good in thy sight.

With my faith in the philosothy of God's administration of human affairs; with my confidence in the triumph of right; with my knowledge of him we mourn to-day, I can even now see that grander, far grander results will see that grander, for grander results will be gathered from the mighty struggle soon to terminate, by the death of Mr. Lincoln, than ever could have been gathered by his illustrions life. His blood will cement the very foundation of the new Temple of Liberty.

In this there is nothing to lessen the sincerity and tenderness of our serror for the departed; but there is much to exalt and ennoble our hopes for our seun-

Mr. Lincoln's death will perhaps prevent another terrific war. From it an influence will go forth to subdue our country's enemies on foreign soil. The deep growing sympathy enkindled, by the news of his cruel death, in the British provinces—and the magnanimous, noble sympathy which will doubtless be felt and manifested in Britain when the sad news shall reach that distant shore, will soften down the growing asperities of the nation and banish from their minds the deepening purposes of vengeance, because of many wrongs in the time of our greatest peril. Yes, Britain's profound regret and great sympathy in our bereavement as a nation, will cover up her multitude of sins against America. The bereaved nation will bow, and weep, and forgive, and rise from her great sor rows purified, at last and, glorious in moral beauty.

It is thus, fellow-citizens, from our great loss, I glean hope of exceeding gain. It is thus that from death itself I gather the elements of a new and glo-

Assassinated!-Now assassination is to be execrated by every right-thinking and right-feeling man. It covers its cause with infamy too dark and indelible for redemption. Its tendency is to inaugurate a reign of vengeance; to stel the very heart of mercy and to involve many innocent victims in the fearful retribution it precipitates. It is a crime for which there is no adequate penalty in the statute book of man, and its policy is madness.

Never before in our history as a people did we so much need the enlarged sympathies of the divine heart as we do to-day, and the calming and ennobling influences of religion to restrain us from acts of vnegeance; to keep us from committing the excesses too often committed in the name of freedom. Then let us as a people, bear our griefs to God and pray to be delivered from the fearful hardening and demoralizing influence of exasperation, because of the fearful wrong. While we mourn the cruel death of our noble dead. let us not mar the sacredness of the grief we cherish by any thoughts or purposes of vengeance.

In the case of the assassins, when arrested, let justice do her stern, swift work; and let all people profit by the example; but in the case of the great mass. es of the Southern people, let the cry of a paternal government —of a magnanimous people—be for mercy, not judgment, not vengesnee. Let us prostrate ourselves before our Heavenly Father, imploring the aid of His grace to enable us to think, feel and act like Christian patriots and freemen.

Our noble President is dead - assassinated !-Oh, my God! because he loved cessions to the Southern people. But his country and was faithful to his sacred voice will now ery spare, O, spare the ing any man; he who had one of the kind-insensate children of a too generous government? the thunderholts of vengeance placed in his hands and could have crushed his enehis hands and could have crushe mies to rise no more—withheld and would have still withheld vengeance; yet, my God! he was stricken down at the capital of his country by an assassin's haud, while the taunt of tyranny fell hissing from that assassin's lips on the dying ear of the great martyr—"Sic Semper Tyrannis"—ever so with tyrants. But review his life. Gaze on the scena of his death. In the confidence of his innocence, in the great trust of his manly heart, without guard, mingling with the multitutes of citizens with a calm conscience and a peaceful heart. Is it thus with tyrants? And yet he was taunted as a tyrant. But thanks be to God, the burning twars of the millions of his serburning tears of the millions of his serrowing countrymen will wipe out that re-proach to-day and forever; and the blessings of the millions of the poor and the unbefriended whom he uplifted to mantorious perishi tion of Our harmo bearer anoth -to t plestayed

Our honored President is dead, fellow citizens; but our country lives; and none of her high interests have been imperiled. Her great heart pulsates to day in harmony with the eternal principles of right, of justice, and of liberty.

The people's consecrated standard bearer has fallen; but God has raised up another standard bearer, to fill his place to hear aloft the holy banner of principles.

to bear aloft the holy banner of princi-ple—and the great advance will not be stayed.

What are we, my friends—any of us?
Can we stay the progress of the ages?
Can we arrest the tempest in the majesty of its careering? Can we bind the might of ocean as it breaks on the rocky shore?
What are we? What is the life of man to the life of nations? We perish, we dis as some say in the midst of our cadie, as some say, in the midst of our career; but God's eternal principles move on. The evolving processes of truth are not arrested nor reversed.

The earth still reverberates with the foot-falls of destiny, that is, of God, moving in the van of civilization, and from death itself spring the elements of life.

. We have lost our noble President when we were beginning to comprehend his character, and to appreciate his no-ble worth. To-day he lies cold, silent, still; but a nation are his mourners

We have lost our President, but we have our country still. Her institutions, her prestige, her glory, her genius and all her deathless resolves still survive. She lives and will forever live; and when we forget her, or cease to mingle our tears with her mighty griefs, may God

But I must close. Oh! great martyr of liberty, our thoughts are with thee to-day. A tender sadness gathers round our hearts and we are insufficient for the occasion. We would kneel beside thy coffined remains and with filial affection press thy cold, cold hand and bedew it with our tears; but it may not be: yet if thy glorified spirit be permitted to visit the scenes where thy sorrowing country-men this day congregate to do honor to thy memory and to weep thy cruel death, hear thou the sentiments that cheer the saddened hearts of thy countrymen.

Thou hast fallen, O beloved of America, but in the high noon of thy fame-when thy life was most richly embellished with the lessons of wisdom for thy countrymen and most worthy to stand as an example to coming generations.

And who of generous sympathies; who of noble aspirattons; who of lofty conceptions of right and of liberty, would not rather covet thy record, thy name of mercy, thy stainless fame—even in thy cold and bloody grave—than life on the proudest throne occupied by the oppressor of mankind?

Farewell, then, brave heart! farewell, true patriot! Thy mission is accomplished and our consolations are great; for to-day we hear the voice from heaven pealing over thy last resting place the requiem of hope: "Blessed are the dead that die in the Lord from henceforth, yea, saith the Spirit, for they rest from their labors and their works do follow

The follewing present to mid resolu-tions were adopted at a meeting of the Camp Douglas Circle, Fenian Brother-hood, April 18th, Inst., and ordered to be printed in the Camp Douglas UNION VENETTE:

be printed in the Camp Douglas Union YEPETIE:

Whereas, The American astion has sustained an irreparable loss by the recent dastardly, fiendish, assassination of its Chief Magistrate, Abraham Lincoln, who, by the purity of his motives, kindness of heart, simplicity of manners, proverbial kinnerty and exalted patriotism, endeared himself to the heart of every loyal citizen. Therefore, be it Resolved. That we, the members of the

Resolved, That we, the members of the Camp Douglas Circle Fenian Brother-hood, do most heartily sympathize with the fellow-citizens of our common country. for the calamity which has befallen the nation, at this most important period of its history.

And, whereas, The hand of the infamous assessin aimed a deadly blow at the life of America's greatest statesman, William H. Seward, in whom the oppressed of all nations, but more especially the unfortunate exiles of the Emerald Isle, ever had a warm-hearted, true and tried friend and fearless champion even in the darkest hour of adversity and proscription, ever willing to assert the truth, and ever ready to aid the right and oppose the wrong. Therefore, it is

Resolved, That, as members of the Fenian Brotherhood, we behold in Wm. H. Seward a friend, with whom we cannot afford to part, and we do earnestly and devoutly beseech the Omnipotent Ruler of the universe to preserve the life and restore to health, strength and usefulness, the object of our solicitude, William H. Seward. Scoretary of State, together with his son Frederick, Assistant Secretary of State.

Resolved, That we will hall with delight the apprehension and execution of the cowardly wretches who have perpetrated the diabolical acts referred the foregoing preamble and resolutions. Submitted by Bro Daniel Maloney. MICHAEL McMAHON.

THE MODESTY OF GEN. GRANT.— In a speech in the Senate, Saulsbury of Delaware said he had seen General Grant for the first time that morning on the floor of the Senate, and it seemed to him (Salusbury) that the President had made a great mistake in ap-pointing him to that high position—that the man who did not know how to "cut a swell" better than he, ought not to be a Licut. General. Why, there was not a Lieutenant of the Home Guard in the state of Delaware who could not keep up bigger style than this man whom the President had injudicionaly selected for Lieutenant General. There was not a Lieutenant or Provost Marshal that Stanton sent down to keep the people of Delaware from voting, that could not cut a better swell than General Grant. He (Saulsbury) though this a fit subject for the consideration of the Sen-

RICH.—An upland paper gives the following funny report of proceedings at a recent church festival. Minister assends the music stand and says:

"Ladies and gentlemen—We have engaged this hall for four hours. The rules of our church forbid dancing. If you choose to go on and override us by mere physical force we cannot pre-vent you; but I cannot let this pass without entering my protest against it." High alto voice from the rear of the hall—A-a-amen! Basso profundo voice, from the the same locality - A-a-men ! "Take your partners for a quadrille !"
